

Sea Fly Fishing Casting Camp

On the edge of the Hardangervidda national park in Norway, Dagali Fjellpark presents you with an unique event. You will learn everything you need to know for a successful trip to an island, from advanced casting techniques to tying your own flies. Your skills will improve so that your investment into the trip to the island will be fully utilized.

The author of the FFCC camp and main lecturer: Jaromir Horak, Czech Republic

His sea fly fishing knowledge stands on the numerous trips to various destinations around the world:

Often, when on Mira's trips to islands, fly fishermen struggled with their skills and casting technique, which in turn limited them in catching trophy fish, unnecessarily ruining their dream fly fishing trip. This camp will elevate your fly-fishing casting, stripping and hook setting to a different level. Few days of theory, practice and real fishing will be located in the heart of Norway in Dagali Fjellpark. The camp will be five days long, with theory and dry practice in the mornings and real fishing in the afternoons. We will fish on rivers, lakes and sea fjords. Inland, there are both lake and river brown trout.

This camp is not targeted at catching trophy fish. There are no individual guides for fishing. It is mainly oriented at gaining the theoretical understanding and improving your practical skills. There are no age limitations.

The camp is limited to six anglers. Large focus will be placed on casting: how to do a proper double haul or what is the optimal trajectory of the rod during the cast to "load" the rod efficiently. Other techniques will include: how to avoid losing contact with the fly whilst stripping, practicing setting the hook with your hand not the rod and others. It will be accompanied by a presentation of the proper sea equipment for flat fishing and dredging. Each participant will bring home several hand tied flies, tied by themselves on the Gamagatsu Sea hook series.
